Yes, she comes back to me Oh, a beautiful woman featuring Megan, Tom for correcting these texts. Writer (s): Roy Orbison, Bill Dees' Bill Dees, co-writer of this song, recalled how quickly Roy Orbison wrote it, while his wife, who inspired the song, was out. He sang it when I pounded my hand down on the table, and by the time she came back, we had a song. I love that song. From the moment the rhythm began, I heard heels clicking on the sidewalk, clicking, clicking, a beautiful woman walking down the street, wearing a yellow skirt and red shoes. We wrote Oh Pretty Woman on Friday, the next Friday we recorded it, and the next Friday it was out. End of the line: But wait! What do I see? Is she coming back to me? Fred Foster, a friend of Roy Orbison, produced the song. This track was featured in the 1990 film Pretty Woman with Julia Roberts and Richard Gere. On May 14, 2008, the Library of Congress selected Pretty Woman to remain on the National Records Registry. Abraham Lincoln Rham Abraham Lincoln was a good old man.
